

7.2: INSTITUTIONAL BEST PRACTICE – I

TITLE OF THE PRACTICE:

Awards and Scholarships

OBJECTIVES OF THE PRACTICE:

- To encourage participation rather than competition, and to measure the participant's progress in relation to personal capabilities rather than external standards of achievement.
- To provide opportunities for uninhibited access to activities.
- To promote the values of participation, cooperation, team spirit, and social responsibility.
- To widen the scope and the horizons of the students.
- To help students pay for education by providing financial assistance.
- To assist those who are in need.

THE CONTEXT:

The Student Life Awards are designed to recognize and celebrate outstanding students. Most awards recognize the contribution of a single individual. The University recognizes outstanding contributions to the academic mission by students of our college. These awards, honors, and recognition reflect the college's strong and enduring commitment to excellence in undergraduate, graduate, and professional education, advising, and scholarship. A scholarship is financial aid given to a student on a specific basis; usually academic merit. They can be based on several eligibility criteria as well. Scholarship money does not have to be paid back because it is not a loan. They come in the form of grants and tuition waivers. Scholarships are a wonderful way to assist students in getting through their education. They are given to relieve students and their families of a significant portion of the enormous financial commitments associated with education.

THE PRACTICE:

In our college we practice various awards and scholarship schemes to students to encourage them in their academics. The Award and Scholarship schemes are listed below
